Andreas Maron is a Senior Consultant, Executive Coach and Facilitator with over 30 years of business experience. He holds a Masters degree in engineering and started his business career in a 10-year assignment with EDS, a leading global IT- outsourcing specialist (now HP) where he worked as an account and project manager for large implementation projects in the automotive and IT industry. Andreas continued his career as a board member of the famous powertrain engineering company AVL List GmbH in Graz, Austria, where he spent 5 years, leading the Organizational Development and Strategic IT-Management functions. Andreas also led several merger & acquisition projects as an external project leader e.g. for Cirquent (now NTT Data) or the French ALTRAN Group (diverse internal mergers of independent companies).

Andreas has become one of the most experienced facilitators and consultants within the FranklinCovey organization, holding certifications for almost all major FranklinCovey programmes.

He is specialised in adapting the FranklinCovey Programmes to the upper management of companies in the European region, concentrating on topics such as strategy execution, effective leadership and trust.

He is co-author of the German editions of the business bestsellers 'The 4 Disciplines of Execution' by Chris McChesney and 'Unlocking Potential' by Michael K. Simpson.

Andreas is German and lives near Munich. He is happily married and is the father of three daughters. Besides his professional role his passion is music. He is fluent in German and English and can have casual conversations in Spanish.
